Local newspapers are a valuable source of information on local affairs. The quality and reliability of the information is not always as in-depth or dependable as we would wish, but there is frequently little else available as an alternative. As well as main news reports, smaller items such as photographs, letters, opinions and features – even advertisements – can provide a contemporary view of what life was like in the past.

Since the first Bradford newspaper was produced in 1825, the quantity and the titles of local dailies and weeklies have changed over the years. This leaflet offers only a brief introduction to some of the news sources available.

In addition to local and regional newspapers, we also hold archives of some national titles, including The Times on microfilm dating back to 1785!

Current Day's Issues

Daily copies of the Telegraph and Argus and the Yorkshire Post, as well as a selection of the national tabloids and broadsheets, are located in the City Centre Library on the Ground Floor.

Recent Back Copies

Newspapers for the past few months are kept in the Information Library on the Fourth Floor. Please ask the staff if you would like to see any of them.

The titles currently taken are:

- Telegraph and Argus
- Halifax Evening Courier
- Yorkshire Post
- Huddersfield Examiner
- Yorkshire Evening Post
- Ilkley Gazette
- Keighley News

Back Files

The use and storage of newspapers presents a number of problems, the most serious being the rapid deterioration of the paper itself. As microfilm lasts longer than the original paper copies, and is also easier to store and copy, we have had most of our local newspapers filmed.

Issues of many newspapers are now available on microfilm, although there may not always be a full consecutive run. Please ask the staff to show you where the films are kept, and for help with the microfilm viewers.

Copies of articles or individual pages can be made on a microfilm reader/printer for a small charge.

The newspapers available on microfilm are:

Other Local Newspapers

Microfilming is expensive, and some of the older papers are only available in bound volumes. Since these original copies are in a fragile condition, prior arrangement must be made to use them; a few are too fragile to be brought out at all. Please contact the Specialist Librarian (Local Studies) for further details:

Keighley Library also holds its own newspaper archive for that area. For further details, please contact:
